Gamma Solutions is proud to be a part of the Future Logistics Living Lab

Melbourne March 4th 2011 - Gamma Solutions today announced its participation in the Future Logistics Living Lab. The Future Logistics Living Lab is designed to investigate real world problems; by using innovative technology help to solve some of the issues facing the Logistics Industry.

The Lab is located at NICTA's Australian Technology Park in Sydney and is a collaboration of leading logistics companies, universities, research organisations and IT providers. The participants of the Living Lab project are: Gamma Solutions, Linfox, Hamburg Sud, Casella Wines, Ericsson, GS1 Australia, Google, Tradegate, XAct Solutions, Victoria University and the University of New South Wales.

"Gamma Solutions is proud to be involved with the Future Logistics Living Lab Project." Michael Atallah Managing Director of Gamma Solutions Pty Ltd. "We believe it provides the perfect platform for Gamma Solutions to demonstrate to a variety of industries how new technologies such as RFID and Voice Picking can help optimise workflow; specifically the flow of information between the different nodes of a supply chain.

We are confident that the collaboration between industries and researchers in projects such as the Future Logistics Living Labs, in conjunction with organisations such as GS1, will display how the supply chain industry can revolutionise the way we conduct business and achieve the optimum goal of increasing both productivity and accuracy."
